Central 70 Project: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

Tony Devito, Mines alum and Project Director on the CDOT Central 70 Project, will discuss the reconstruction of a 10-mile strip of I-70 just east of downtown Denver.

Presentation topics include:
• Project background
• Environmental planning process
• Project design
• Project delivery
• Right-of-way
• Mitigations and commitments
• Where we are now

Tony is a 25-year employee of the Colorado Department of Transportation (CDOT) and previously served as the Regional Transportation Director for Region One for seven years, which encompasses the eight counties of the Denver-Metro Area. In July 2015, Tony readily accepted his current position as the Central 70 Project Director. A Professional Engineer, Tony also participates in CDOT’s executive management team, responsible for developing Department policies. Tony began his career with CDOT in 1991, gaining expertise in design, construction and traffic activities statewide.

A native Coloradan, Tony graduated from the Colorado School of Mines with a B.S. in Civil Engineering and he, along with his family, enjoy the amazing outdoor activities that this great state has to offer.
